

Leviahub tops off its portfolio on the Iberian Peninsula

The family keeps growing

The Italian supply chain specialist Leviahub has integrated two new European companies into its group: GSI Software from Spain and Develop from Portugal.

With its acquisitions of GSI Software and Develop in September, Leviahub took two further strategically important steps towards strengthening its European network. The integrations follow previous mergers with companies such as Nova Systems, ithings, Beconnecthub and Digitalhub and expand both the geographical reach and the technological depth of the Italian supply chain specialist. GSI Software, which is based in Cádiz, specialises in digital solutions for customs clearance and supply chain and complements Leviahub's existing service offering. Already operating representations in the cities of Barcelona and Madrid, the company is thus strengthening its position in the Spanish market. Develop also became part of the Leviahub family at almost the same time. Based in Lisbon-Cascais, the company has additional locations in Portugal, i.e. in Leiria, Aveiro and Porto, and is recognised as a regional logistics player with a strong focus on technology.

"Both acquisitions are an expression of our vision of a networked, innovative and internationally orientated supply chain," explains Chief Officer Alessandro Parovel. Leviahub's aim is to create operational synergies, pool expertise and provide a consistent, digital logistics service offering across Europe.
